DETAILED ACTION

The final rejection mailed on September 19, 2006 has been withdrawn due to the following action:

Status of Claims

Claims 1, 3-11, 13-15, 17-30 and 32-44 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 34-41 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schultheiss et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,755,835) in view of Wolf (U.S. Patent No. 6,629,977) and further in view Baker et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,569,251).

Schultheiss et al. discloses the method steps of securing an implant to a bone which includes implanting a bone screw anchor (10) within the bone using a driving tool operable with the head of the anchor; injecting bone cement into a threaded bore extending through the head to at least a portion of the intermediary portion using a cement delivery device that allows the anchor to be secured; and securing the implant to the anchor using a threaded fastening device secure within the bore (see Figure 6). Schultheiss et al. also discloses that the internally threaded portion (55) is inherently protected during the ejecting step, the delivery device (76) is connected to the internal thread of the anchor to protect the threads from being contaminated with bone cement during the injecting step and the bone cement exits at least one port (68) located on the side of the anchor. Also disclosed is threading a fastening device (58) into the anchor to a depth not beyond a tip (24) of the anchor.

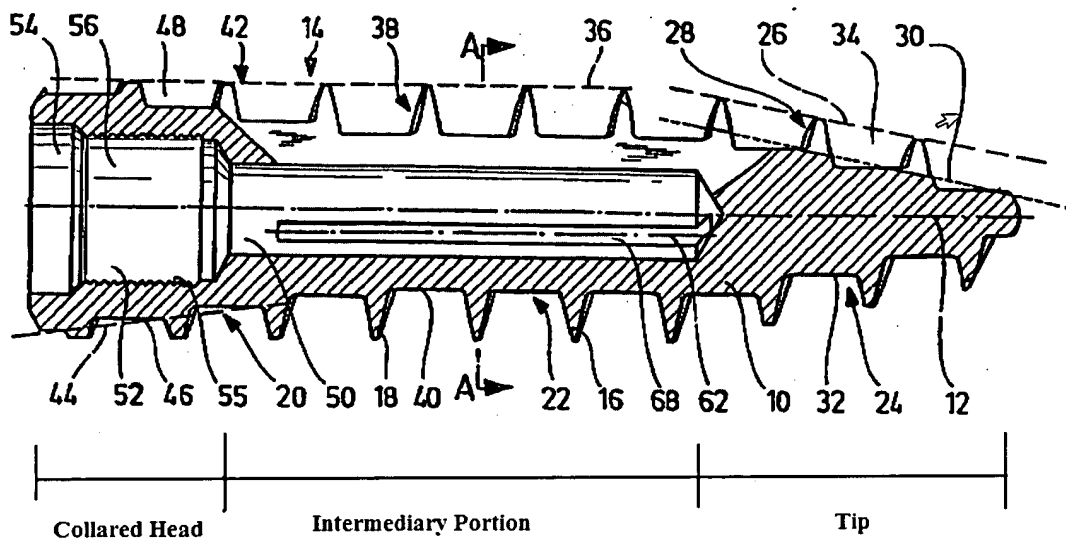

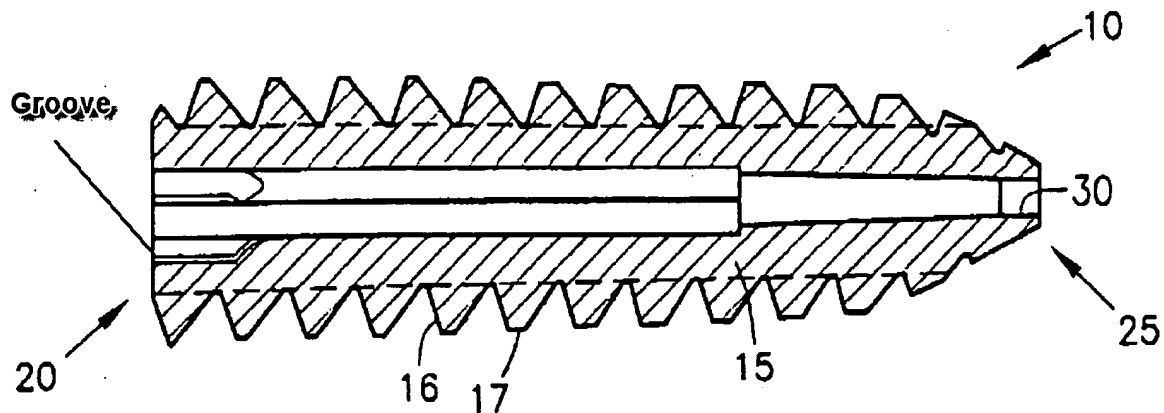

Figure 1

Schultheiss discloses the claimed invention except for an open tip or a screw head having grooves. Wolf discloses a groove (see Figure 2 below) to receive a driving tool to optimize torque capacity when inserting the device (Paragraph 9). Wolf also discloses an open tip (30) so that a guide pin may be used during delivery and installation (Paragraph 11). It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to construct the device of Schultheiss with a head defining a groove as well as an open tip in view of Wolf, in order to have a device that can be installed with ease and accuracy.

45

The combination of Schultheiss et al. and Wolf disclose the claimed invention except for placing an implant over the anchor and fastening the implant to the anchor using a fastening device. Barker et al. disclose the method of placing the implant, in this case a bone plate (12), over the anchors and using a fastening device to the anchor in order to secure the assembly and strengthen the bone (Col. 3, Paragraph 3). It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to combine the method of securing a bone screw anchor system to a bone of Schultheiss et al. and Wolf and applying it with a bone plate in view of Baker et al., in order to have secure support for a damaged bone and allow it to heal accordingly.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 34-41 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1,3-11,13-15,17,18 and 42-44 are allowed.
